Sicily and Sardinia are the main islands . the Vatican City and San Marino are inside the Italian Republic. Rome, which was the capital of the Roman Empire, was for centuries the political and cultural center of Western civilization.

Our Region: Lazio

Lazio is an administrative region of Central Italy, and Viterbo is one of its five main cities, among which there is Rome, the capital. The region is surrounded by mountains and stretches along the Tyrrhenian Sea. One of its main river is the Tevere.

Province of Viterbo

The province of Viterbo stretches from Rome to Tuscany with the Tyrrhenian Sea to the West and Umbria to the East. It has a population of about 300,000 and its capital is Viterbo, the area's largest town with approximately 60,000 inhabitants. The town is geographically in the center of the region. Known also as "Tuscia", the province of Viterbo expresses the vivacity of an area in which the economy has been created by man rather than imposed on him. It is an area where agriculture represents not only an enormous resource but also an essential part of local life, full of pride and kindness. Its folklore remains alive in festivals and commemorative events. The whole area is characterised by historical and artistic memories. Gastronomy is also important here since farm products find their way from the fields to the many restaurant tables of the area in just a few hours. This land is also called Tuscia, because it was the heart of Etruscan civilization.

City of Viterbo

The town has ancient origins (it is believed that Viterbo derives from the Latin Urbs Vetus, that is, the Old Town) and has a large medieval town center San Pellegrino. Viterbo is historically known as the City of the Popes: in fact, in the thirteenth century, the Papal Palace hosted the Popes for many years and there were various elected Popes: .
